Chancellor reports to SIU Trustees

by Kevin Eagan

Alestle News Stringer

As SIUE enrollment increases, plans are being made to keep students involved.

The Southern Illinois University Board of Trustees held their first meeting for the semester Thursday and discussed student enrollment and involvement.

Chancellor Vaughn Vandegrift spoke to the trustees about keeping new freshmen and transfer students involved on campus by adding freshman seminar classes and more academic peer mentoring.

"We need to bind (students) more to the university community," Vandegrift said.

He hopes to work closer with the Kimmel Leadership Center to provide more opportunities for new transfer students.

There are also plans to keep residence halls open during the summer so that students can graduate on time.

"We noticed that students were taking five or six years to graduate instead of four," Vandegrift said.

The university is working to open more residence halls. Evergreen Hall, SIUE's newest residence hall, is scheduled to open for fall 2007. It will be for upperclassmen and graduate students, and will be set up more like apartments than dorms.

"The quality of construction (for Evergreen Hall) is looking good," Vandegrift said.

Vandegrift also acknowledged that the university is working to improve parking as enrollment increases, but did not offer any immediate parking improvement plans.

"There is certainly a parking problem," Vandegrift said. "We are looking at ways to fix this."

The SIU Board of Trustees will meet again on Oct. 12 at the Carbondale campus.

SIUE DAY looks for more contributions

by Holly Meyer

In order to increase the total percentage of faculty and staff and local businesses that contribute funds to SIUE, the university has created a new fundraising initiative called SIUE DAY.

"Participation is the number one goal for both the local business and faculty efforts," Annual Giving Director Julie Babington said. "Currently, 18 percent of our faculty and staff are contributing, and we would like

"SIUE DAY participants for both the local and campus efforts are able to designate where they would like their gift to go," Babington said in reference to athletics and academics.

The participants in the fundraiser will receive a 2006 SIUE DAY partner window cling for their donations.

According to Babington, the results of the faculty and staff participation in the British Parliament member Adam Holloway and U.S. Rep. John Shimkus give their views on current events

by Matthew Schroyer

A member of the British Parliament told SIUE students Friday that the War in Iraq was unnecessary, but troops should remain to build stability.

British Parliament member Adam Holloway and U.S. Rep. John Shimkus discussed with nearly 40 students as part of an educational program in the Morris University Center.

According to Shimkus, Holloway flew in from the Washington, D.C. area while touring the country.

Holloway, a parliamentary member for the Gravesend district in England, talked about several topics including the war in Iraq, Afghanistan, and the British parliamentary system.

The discussion was designed for political science and related majors, but was open to all students and faculty to attend. The Public Administration and Policy Analysis Department Chair T.R. Carr hosted the event and said it was a unique chance for students to gain an international perspective.

"England is a major ally of the United States, and this allows us to gain the insights from one of the members of parliament," Carr said.

Holloway recalled his time in Iraq, first as a member of the British military and later as a television reporter. He noted the enthusiasm of the Iraqi people shortly after the Sadaam regime fell.

"I was mobbed by a man who was looting an incubator from the hospital in Kirkuk," Holloway said. "He left his incubator for a second and hugged me. It was a bizarre experience."

The reactions of the Iraqi people have changed greatly since then, according to Holloway. He said Iraq has become a dangerous place, and found it "deeply depressing" that it's no longer safe to travel in the daytime.

"Today, the only way I can get around Iraq is flying at night by helicopter," Holloway said.

Holloway said the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks allowed America to gain the sympathy of the world, which is waning along with the condition of Iraq and Afghanistan.

"Unfortunately, I think we've used up that good will because of the chaos that we've allowed Iraq to descend into," Holloway said.

He commented that there were insufficient numbers of troops to maintain stability, which created a "power vacuum." He also thinks the coalition forces in Iraq and Afghanistan should work quicker on reconstruction of roads, irrigation, and other infrastructure.

"You don't win wars with bombs or guns," he said, "you win wars by winning the hearts and minds."

Holloway and Shimkus took questions from students, one of them being how long they thought troops should be kept in Iraq. While Holloway believes troops shouldn't have been sent to Iraq, he and Shimkus both agreed that troops should be kept there indefinitely. Shimkus told the crowd why he believes soldiers should remain in Iraq.

"I don't think anyone knows the answer other than a democratic Iraq that can govern

New Enrollment Management
Assistant Vice Chancellor
Scott Belobrajdic

by Justin Gibson
Alestle News Reporter

Scott C. Belobrajdic will soon become SIUE's new Enrollment Management Assistant Vice Chancellor.

The opening for the position is the result of former Vice Chancellor Boyd Bradshaw leaving SIUE to become the assistant provost for Enrollment Services at the University of Louisville.

Belobrajdic will begin his job at SIUE Monday, Nov. 6.

"Scott Belobrajdic will bring 19 years of experience in enrollment management from three academic institutions to SIUE," Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Paul Ferguson said. "He will be able to provide insightful leadership for the Office of Enrollment Management."

Before his SIUE appointment, Belobrajdic served as vice president for enrollment at Illinois College in Jacksonville since 2002. Before his current position, he worked for 14 years in college admissions at St. Louis University and DePaul University.

"My work at SIUE in many ways will be similar to my other jobs, because it has always been my goal to find students who are a good fit to an institution," Belobrajdic said. "However, the scope of responsibility is much larger at SIUE."

Ferguson believes that Belobrajdic's past experiences will be beneficial to SIUE.

"His experience in admissions, recruiting, financial aid and retention will be especially useful in helping SIUE achieve our enrollment goals of diverse and an academically successful student body," Ferguson said.

While serving as the vice chancellor, Belobrajdic will manage and oversee different offices at SIUE.

"I will supervise the Office of Admissions, the Financial Aid Department, Career Services and the Office of the Registrar," Belobrajdic said.

According to a press release from SIUE, Belobrajdic has professional affiliations with the Illinois Association of College Admission Counseling, National Association of College Admissions Counseling, the College Board and the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

Belobrajdic has a bachelor of arts in communications/studio art from Illinois College and a master's in Human Services Administration/Counseling from DePaul University.

"His leadership style is conducive to developing a strong morale among the staff," Ferguson said. "He also brings a strong commitment to students to ensure they have a positive experience at SIUE."

"I am very excited to get settled in and started," Belobrajdic said.

Event to celebrate '80s at Cougar Lanes

by Jesse Bookwalter
Alestle News Reporter

Students can bring out their inner '80s in the "Free night of fun" at Cougar Lanes.

The event is 8 p.m. to midnight Friday. The theme of the event is "I love the 80s." Everyone is encouraged to show his or her pride for the 80's, but it is not mandatory.

The event is a chance for everyone to get active and relieve some of the stress of school life. The Campus Activities Board is running the event.

"Our aim is to give and help create a well-rounded student We're not only here to focus on academics," CAB Graduate Assistant Lise Suliman said, "but also here to have fun."

"We are sticking strictly to the '80s theme," Special Events Programming Chair Josh Buehnerkemper said.

There is free bowling, billiards, DJ with karaoke, inflatable twister and contests.

Prizes will be awarded for the biggest hair and best 80's costume. Prizes may include an 80's movie package, CD package or a gift card. There is no guarantee, however, that the winners will get the specific prizes mentioned.

Other activities going at the event are spin art and sand art. Spin art is spinning a piece of paper while putting drops of paint on the paper. Sand art is putting different colored sand into containers. Punch, cookies and chips will be served at the event.

"We are giving students free opportunities to experience our campus and the St. Louis and surrounding areas," Suliman said.

Tuesday there will be a booth outside of Auntie Anne's from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Booth workers will be handing out slap wrist bands and Rubik's Cubes as a promotional offer for the event.

"There are a lot of events that go on in the Meridian (Ballroom) and the Goshen (Lounge) during the week, but we want these late nights especially for students who say there is nothing to do during the weekend," Buehnerkemper said. "We are providing them something to do."

For more information, contact Buehnerkemper at jbuehne@siue.edu or contact Suliman at 650-5794. The activity information can also be found at siue.edu/CAB.

Jesse Bookwalter can be reached at alestlenews@gmail.com or 650-3527.

Getting to know your government

President

Photo Courtesy

Name: Carl B. Mitchell
Student Government Title: President
Hometown: St. Louis
Age: 21
Major: Speech Communications
Minor: Black Studies

Why did you come to/stay at SIUE?

SIUE was a perfect choice for me, in that it was far enough from home that my parents wouldn't "surprise visit" me, but it was close enough for me to run back home when I needed help.

What are your future plans?

It was always a dream of mine to become mayor of the great city of St. Louis. Since then, I have fallen in love with SIUE, so working here until my dream manifests itself would be wonderful.

What are other organizations you are a part of?

I am a proud member of the greatest fraternity in the world – Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated, which will be celebrating 100 years of existence this year. The work and time associated with being president of Student Government does not leave me energy to participate in other organizations. Before I took the title, I was actively involved as a resident assistant in Cougar Village, R.A.M. (Retention of African-American Men) and many other organizations.

Why did you join Student Government?

I was always interested in policy and procedure. The idea that I could have some impact on the future of myself, my peers and the university was enticing.

What do you feel is the most important issue facing Student Government and the student body right now? How do you plan to address it?

Our biggest problem is actually a good problem to have. SIUE is growing more and more each year. This university went from being recognized as a commuter campus to running out of room in the residence halls for students. We have been, and are continuing to make changes to accommodate the increase we are seeing each year. The new Evergreen Hall, the Student Success Center and other projects we are currently working on will help to better embrace the increase of students.

The university is about to celebrate its 50th anniversary. Where do you see SIUE in another 50 years?

Wow. I picked a wonderful time to run for office. It is exciting to look at old pictures of SIUE contrasted with what we are today. I see SIUE gaining even more national recognition and prestige. Even though SIUE is continuing to grow, I would not like to see us grow to the capacity of 30,000 students like many other universities have. I believe the relatively small class sizes and access to faculty is something that makes us a great choice.

Other comments?

Thank you for the chance to allow the students to get more information about Student Government. Anyone interested in joining SG should come visit our office located in the Kimmel Leadership Development Center.

itself, protect itself and sustain itself," Shimkus said.

Holloway also spoke about the current status of the British government, saying Prime Minister Tony Blair lost popularity due to his support of the war in Iraq and his use of government spending.

Holloway said Blair's political party, the Labour party, would not win the next general election because the United Kingdom views candidates and their parties as "one in the same." He said this wasn't the case in America.

"I think you can separate the president from the Republican party here," Holloway said.

Additionally, Holloway remarked on the relationship between Great Britain and America.

"Britain remains the biggest foreign investor in the United States ... and America is the greatest investor in Britain," he said.

Carr thought the discussion went very well, and hopes to hold similar events in the future with other foreign delegates.

"I think they really knew and understood some of the issues and concerns for our students," Carr said. "We want to do this again so we can expose our students to these perspectives."

fundraiser will be presented to the community on SIUE DAY.

"It is imperative for SIUE to secure its family (faculty and staff) gifts first, as community businesses often want to know if our family participates before they will consider a gift of their own," Babington said.

Sept. 26, local businesses are invited to a hot, complimentary breakfast sponsored by the Associated Bank and hosted by Steve Smith, who will be the next

Chamber of Commerce president.

"It is our hope that the Chamber of Commerce will adopt SIUE DAY as one of their own events next fall," Babington said.

According to Babington, the university hopes the local businesses notice the impact SIUE has on the community and participate in the fundraiser.

Stereotyping fails to improve ratings

Is it just me, or has 2006 been a year of controversy? Better yet, controversy that led to little or no activity?

From Madonna's bit with the crucifixion in Italy to the movie "The Da Vinci Code" taking a jab at religion, it seems like the idea of "if you have no ideas left, just try something stupid" makes the most sense.

Or does it? "Survivor" creator Mark Burnett seems to have run out of ideas, so he decided to take a spicier approach to his show and split up the contestants by race. So we have the Caucasians, Asian-Americans, blacks and Latinos battling for a $1 million prize on the Cook Islands.

What is even more interesting, though, is that according to Reuters, only an average of 18 million viewers actually watched it. I was not one of them because I was busy with night class.

Perspective: Scholars say Congress is failing America

Two leading political scientists, Norman Ornstein and Thomas Mann, recently came to the University of Minnesota to decry the dysfunction that has infected Congress.

We know of no more patriotic way for these two scholars to have observed the fifth anniversary of Sept. 11. The danger in the trends they described may not be as dramatic as a terrorist attack. But it is as threatening in the long run to Americans' ability to govern themselves well as would be a plot hatched in an al-Qaeda cave.

Ornstein, of the American Enterprise Institute, and Mann, of the Brookings Institution, are worth heeding on the subject. Each has spent more than three decades in a relationship with

That could be a big part of the reason for the low numbers, but I think it is only a small one. Honestly, it is not looking better when NBC shows like "My Name is Earl" and "The Office" return to primetime this week.

Even if I did not have class, I probably wouldn't have watched "Survivor." Regardless of the new approach, it is still the same thing — people telling stories of how they are stabbing each other's backs and taking each other's food and what not.

Then, they — drum roll, please — vote someone off the island.

This is the 13th time they have done this. Is there anything else?

I also wondered why Burnett decided to reinforce stereotypes, like that blacks are more athletic than Asians or something like that. If he wanted to do that, he might as well make it more realistic.

I would suggest that he split people up into four groups based on class status. He could start with the high-maintenance group, who are well-dressed in Armani or Gucci or something, and make them learn to survive without their Starbucks and debit cards.

Next, put in a group of rural men and women who know how to grow things and take a beating from the sun.

After that, put in a group of folks who grew up outside big cities and lived only on their computers, Xboxes and pirated movies. Without those things, how would they survive on an island? Trouble is, what they do in World of Warcraft does not translate to a real-life situation.

Finally, put in street-smart folks who have lived in poverty and fight to eat. On top of that, they can figure out the woods pretty quickly and let those animals know who's boss.

Perhaps I am being too stereotypical?

With those four duking it out, I could see it being the most entertaining "Survivor" since its launch six years ago. People want reality television, so why not make it real?

Until then, I guess we will see how the ratings do this week on the racially-charged "Survivor."

Is 2006 over yet?

Zach Groves can be reached at alestlenews@gmail.com or 650-3527.

Perspective: The tipping point

You're dining at a swanky restaurant. Your server has helped you and your date get a romantic little table in the corner. He's delivered your meal with perfect timing. Do you give him a fabulous tip?

Or do you stiff him?

Restaurant patrons beware: If you leave a stingy tip, the world may find out.

The Associated Press recently reported that waiters are employing the Internet to express their displeasure with their customers. One New Yorker has a blog, www.WaiterRant.net, on which he gives scathing reports about rude and impatient customers, including details on their poor tipping habits.

It's hard to blame the waiters. There are few occupations in which you do the work and the employer decides how much to pay (or whether to pay at all).

A former Atlanta waiter who's now a restaurant manager has been trying to persuade restaurant owners to follow the lead of Europeans and charge an automatic 20 percent service fee on every check.

Michael Lynn, a professor at Cornell University's Center for Hospitality Research, has found that many people do feel strong social pressure to tip in the 15 to 20 percent range.

In general, customers don't want automatic service charges. It strips the server of the motivation to do a good job if he or she knows they're going to be paid the same anyway.

Research shows that customers believe waiters should be paid more, but customers aren't always willing to pay higher prices to subsidize those higher wages. Restaurateurs aren't always willing to hike their menu prices or take a bite out of their profits to boost waiters' salaries.

It seems unlikely that many U.S. restaurants will adopt the automatic service charge, though many do impose one for larger groups. Waiters' earnings will continue to be based in part on tips. Those tips will sometimes be generous and sometimes stingy. That's the nature of the job.

Give them a break. If you can afford the price of the meal, you can afford to be generous to the waiter. And treat them respectfully. A seat at the table doesn't come with a license to treat the waiter like a lackey.

Marijuana legalization.
Will everyone agree or will the

by Matthew Schroyer
Alestle Lifestyles Reporter

The editor of a U.S. based publication advocating marijuana legalization will come face-to-face with a retired agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration on the SIUE campus, but no cavity searches will be involved.

The confrontation will take place in a Campus Activities Board sponsored program, Wolfman Productions' "Heads vs. Feds: The Great Debate", at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The issues dealing with marijuana legalization will be debated in the Morris University Center's Meridian Ballroom.

Since 1988, Steven Hager has served in the top editorial position at "High Times," most recently returning to the position in early 2006, according to the tour's Web site. In addition to his work for the magazine, Hager also made several documentaries and books, including "Beat Street" and "The Octopus Conspiracy," respectively.

Robert Stutman, on the other hand, is a former special agent of the New York Field Division, the largest DEA division in the country. After retiring in 1990, Stutman went on to be a special consultant on substance abuse for television networks CBS and PBS and has appeared regularly on major broadcast network news programs.

New York Magazine once called Stutman "the most famous narc in America," according to the Web site.

According to the tour's Web site, the two debaters have filled auditoriums at universities across the nation, including University of South Carolina and Virginia Tech.

"This truly has been one of the most exciting events on campus," the University of South Carolina on the Wolfman Productions' Web site. "The ballroom was filled to its maximum capacity of 700 people ... We had to turn away 400 people."

nerve with our students when we gave out the first 500 tickets in just two and a half days," the Web site said.

Lise Suliman, a CAB graduate assistant, previously attended the event with other CAB members, and felt inspired to bring it to SIUE.

"We saw this debate at a conference and it was very well received by the student delegate there," she said.

Suliman is anticipating that the program will create a similar atmosphere and bring many students the opportunity to voice opinions and become informed.

"We're hoping this is an issue that will actually speak to our student body and get a lot of audience participation," Suliman said.

Chris Worrick, also a member of CAB, said the event is timely and thinks it will translate into a great forum for discussion.

"It's a very important issue right now," he said. "We're hoping as soon as you come in, you're going to want to debate it and talk about it seriously."

Suliman expects the issue of decriminalization to take center stage, and thinks students will have many questions and opinions on the subject.

"Obviously, people want to use (marijuana) for medicinal purposes," she said. "Other countries have it legalized and they want to know why we can't have it here."

Worrick said the debate would cover a variety of other topics, including the war on drugs. He explained how Hager might debate the effectiveness of the nation's anti-drug plan.

"Steve will also be talking about how we can better spend our money – instead of a war against marijuana – on a war that's against other drugs that are more harmful," he said.

Worrick encourages students to speak and take advantage of a moderated public forum.

"There will be a moderator to make sure that anyone who wants to say something will have a chance," he said.

Some students believe legalizing marijuana would make sense.

Junior Andrea Harrawood thinks that marijuana can help those in pain, and the benefits outweigh the risks.

"If someone is suffering ... then I think (marijuana) should be allowed," she said. "It's silly to worry about someone that's about to die getting addicted if it can save them from pain."

Not all students agree that pot should be decriminalized. Junior biology major Adam Rammacher is against the legalization of marijuana.

"If it's illegal, it's illegal," he said.

Math education sophomore Ken Bratton does not plan on attending the debate, but is nonetheless concerned that legalizing marijuana will create more societal problems.

VS.

"I see destruction to your body, relationships, finances," he said. "I don't see any reason (to legalize marijuana)."

Bratton thinks if marijuana had significant medical importance, drug companies would have lobbied for changes a long time ago. With the exception of a few rare medical cases, he does not think the pro-legalization camp is very convincing.

"If their only reason is for medicinal purposes, then they are lying," he said.

CAB hosted an informational table in the Morris University Center Monday and will host a table Tuesday, as well.

Getting caught can cost students college

by Megan Twohey

Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

Nearly 3,000 Wisconsin students have been denied financial aid for college under a federal law that remains controversial even as it undergoes reform.

The law prohibits people who have been convicted of selling or possessing drugs from receiving Pell Grants and other forms of federal financial aid.

Since 2000, it has been used to refuse assistance to more than 189,000 needy students, including 2,897 in Wisconsin, according to a state-by-state breakdown released for the first time by the U.S. Department of Education.

Wisconsin legislators are pushing for a state version of the law, arguing that college students with drug offenses are not deserving of any form of taxpayer aid.

But critics say the federal law amounts to double jeopardy, and that children from low-income families are being denied the right to pursue a higher education.

"It's really unfair," Nathan Bush, a junior at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, who is a plaintiff in a federal lawsuit challenging the law, said.

The Kenosha native, whose parents are public school teachers, stands to lose thousands of dollars in federal aid after pleading guilty in January to a misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana. He doesn't know how he will be able to pay for his senior year.

"I'm from a working-class family," Bush, who works two jobs, said. "We're not going to be able to make up the slack."

Congress passed the federal law as an amendment to the Higher Education Act in 1998. As a result, applications for federal financial aid include this question: Has the student ever been convicted of possessing or selling illegal drugs?

It's a self-reporting system; according to the statistics released by the U.S. Department of Education, more than 260,000 students left the drug conviction question blank in 2000-01 school year and had their forms processed. Those who answer "yes" are sent an additional worksheet that they must fill out.

Under the law, students are to be denied federal assistance if they admit to being convicted in state or federal court. Convictions that occurred before students turned 18 do not count unless they were tried as an adult.

Students convicted of possession lose one year of assistance for their first offense, two years for a second offense and become ineligible indefinitely for a third. A first-time conviction for selling drugs makes a student ineligible for two years, while the second offense results in indefinite ineligibility. Drug offenders can regain eligibility if they complete a federally recognized drug treatment program.

The law, estimated to have cost students as much as $54 million in Pell Grants and as much as $164 million in federal loans per year, targets no other class of criminal behavior. Convicted rapists and murderers are not denied aid.

More than 250 organizations have come out against it, including the American Bar Association, the American Public Health Association, the American Federation of Teachers and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. Opponents have argued that the law prohibits drug offenders from improving their lives and serves no benefit to society.

In response to criticism, Congress passed a measure in February that limits ineligibility to only those students convicted of drug crimes while receiving financial aid. It's a change that will be implemented by the U.S. Department of Education starting this summer, even though the measure was part of broader legislation that is caught up in litigation due to a technical mistake, Jane Glickman, a department spokeswoman, said.

But Adam Wolf, staff attorney at the American Civil Liberties Union, said even with the revision to the law, "underlying injustice remains."

In a complaint filed in federal court in South Dakota last month, the civil rights organization called for the law to be declared unconstitutional on the grounds that it irrationally targets people convicted of drug sentences and punishes these students for the same crime twice. Bush of UW-Madison is one of three students named as plaintiffs.

The ACLU said access to higher education is being denied to those with a drug conviction who are not sufficiently wealthy to pay for college themselves. The law, it said, discriminates against racial minority groups because U.S. Justice Department statistics that show that blacks constitute 12 percent of the U.S. population and 13 percent of drug users, but account for more than 62 percent of those convicted of drug offenses.

The U.S. Department of Education is reviewing the complaint, according to a written statement released by Glickman, but the agency appears to support the law.

"Congress sought to discourage illegal drug use by the nation's youth by passing this restriction on federal student aid in 1998," the statement said. "The department supports Congress' efforts to decrease illegal drug use, and protect the health and safety of all our nation's students, from pre-school to adult."

Last month, Wisconsin's State Assembly passed a bill that would deny state-funded financial aid to college students convicted of possessing or selling drugs. Similar bills in the state Senate have not made it out of committee. Some senators said they prefer to wait for the federal changes to be sorted out before passing a state version of the law.

"We don't have enough state money to satisfy all the applications for financial aid," Rep. Eugene Hahn (R-Cambria), who authored the Assembly bill, said. "This is a way to say that if you don't want to play by the rules, we'll give your money to other people who need it."

The U.S. Department of Education released the state-by-state breakdown of students affected by the federal law in response to a public records request by Students for Sensible Drug Policy, a non-profit organization made up of people who have been or will be denied financial aid under the law.

The group, which made the information public this week, hopes legislators and the public will oppose the law once they discover how it is affecting their state.

The department resisted releasing the numbers. At first, it tried to charge the organization $4,000 for the information, dismissing arguments that the information should be released for free because it is in the public's interest and because Students for Sensible Drug Policy have no commercial interest at stake.

"A review of contents of SSDP's campaign and the materials you submitted in connection with your fee waiver request reveal that the principal goal of your organization is to 'end the war on drugs,'" the department told the organization in a letter dated September 2005. "As SSDP's campaign could directly benefit those who would profit from the deregulation or legalization of drugs, I cannot conclude, based on the information you have made available to me, that SSDP has no commercial interest in the disclosure sought."

The department agreed to turn the numbers over free of charge only after the organization retained legal counsel and threatened to sue.

Sweet and sour

SIUE's conference winning streak snapped; Cougars topple seventh-ranked UW-Parkside

by Mallory Hensley
Alestle Sports Stringer

The No. 13 SIUE men's soccer team experienced some intense highs and heartbreaking lows in two conference games over the weekend.

The Cougars went out Sunday and lost their first Great Lakes Valley Conference game in nearly four years.

"They're really gunning for us and we have to be ready," SIUE Head Coach Ed Huneke said of conference opponents. "Teams really gear up for us because of our accomplishments in the past few years."

After dropping two slots in last week's NCAA Division II National Coaches Association poll, the Cougars faced a pair of GLVC teams who have been ranked in the top 20 some time this season.

"We knew this was going to be a competitive weekend. It always is," Huneke said. "These teams have a history of being very good. And the thing is they really want to beat us."

The Cougars did not get to relish in their Friday night victory over the No. 7 University of Wisconsin-Parkside for long. Lewis University, which was ranked No. 13 as recently as the Sept. 5 poll, knocked them off their feet Sunday.

The loss snapped a 38-game conference winning streak for SIUE. The last time that the Cougars were defeated in a Great Lakes Valley Conference game was Oct. 18, 2002, when the University of Missouri-St. Louis pulled off a 1-0 win.

"They were really fired up for it," Huneke said of Lewis. "They had a big rowdy crowd. They played well and we played well. But they got the goal."

Lewis' win did not come without controversy. The Cougars put a ball into the Flyer's goal in the 38th minute. However, officials waved the play off and deemed the goal invalid due to a Cougar penalty.

"We really felt we deserved (it). But that's life on the road," Huneke said. "It was a bad call."

Huneke said the team originally thought officials called the Cougars off-sides but later found that John Matthews was whistled for unnecessary roughness.

"(Senior) John Mathews supposedly pushed one of their players," Huneke said. "From our vantage point and his response was that the guy wasn't anywhere around. But those things just happen. It's unfortunate."

Not one of the Cougars' other 20 shots slipped past Lewis goalie Anthony Szymel, who picked up seven saves in the game.

"He made some big saves in point-blank situations," Huneke said. "We just couldn't penetrate that goal line. But we were all

Women's golf finishes third at IWU Fall Classic

by Nicholas Johnson
Alestle Sports Reporter

The SIUE women's golf team chipped their way to a third-place finish in the Illinois Wesleyan University Fall Golf Classic Sunday. Entering the final round of play, the Cougars were tied for third with the host team IWU.

When the clubs were packed for the day, SIUE had shot a 319 in the final round, which put the team eight strokes ahead of IWU for sole possession of third place.

The University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire shot the best round of the tournament with a second round of 305, but it was not enough as DePauw University won with a two-round total score of 632, to UW-EC's 633.

SIUE Head Coach Jennifer Jakel said she was pleased with her team's performance at the tournament.

SIUE shot a two-round 641, finishing just nine shots behind champion DPU.

Freshman Olivia Fox fared best of the Cougars, finishing tied for third overall with a two-round score of 155.

"Olivia Fox is a great player and she has a lot of talent," Jakel said. "She is a very dedicated player that works hard on improving her game. As a freshman, she has made the transition from high school golf to collegiate golf without much of a struggle. She has performed well for the team in the first three tournaments of this year and will continue to improve as the year goes on."

Senior Ashley Hemann shot 159, good for a tie for 14th overall. Rounding out the SIUE individual scores were freshman Sheena Collins with a 165 and senior Casey Biddinger and junior Natalie Connaway both with a tally of 167.

"Everyone on the team needs to improve on their short games, by doing so they will be able to shave a few more shots off their score," Jakel said. "As a team, we need to work on consistently posting four scores in the 70s at each tournament."

The top player of the tournament was Franklin College's Katie Tewell, who shot a 148.

The Cougars' season will come to a close after the University of Southern Indiana Fall Classic Sunday and Monday at the Helfrich Hills Golf Club in Evansville, Ind.

"Coming off this weekend's tournament in Bloomington, I believe the team will fare pretty well at the USI tournament this coming weekend," Jakel said. "There will be a lot of teams from our region participating in this tournament and that will provide us another opportunity to improve our region standings as we end our fall season."

SIUE senior Kyle Lickenbrock shoots a five-under par to top the field of golfers

The Cougars were rained out of their own backyard Sunday.

The SIUE men's golf team picked up an 18-hole win at the Cougar Classic over the weekend, edging out the University of Indianapolis by three strokes.

SIUE senior Kyle Lickenbrock finished in first place, shooting a 67, five under par, Saturday to beat out McKendree College's Zane Belden by three strokes.

"That was an outstanding round he played," SIUE Head Coach Kyle Viehl said. "He played really well. He's playing really well so far this year."

Play was suspended Sunday because of rain.

SIUE finished with a score of 286, Indianapolis racked up 289 points and McKendree rounded out the top three at 291.

"They played very well," Viehl said. "It's what we needed and I was very pleased with them."

"Indianapolis is probably the best team in our region," Viehl added. "So for us to beat them is really good."

Senior Kyle Gansauer finished tied for fifth, shooting an even par for the Cougars. Fellow senior Brian Kuddes placed 10th with a 73. Sophomore Mike McKinzie and senior Ryan Coughlin both shot 74. Senior Craig Heinzmann rounded out the Cougar chippers, swinging for a 78.

Lickenbrock's round of 67 was his best performance in his SIUE career so far.

"Basically, it was just that I feel comfortable on that course," Lickenbrock said. "I feel like every time I tee it up out there, I'm going to play well. I'd say definitely I putted well. That's probably the biggest thing is that I definitely putted very, very well."

"I absolutely love the competition. It's the reason that I play golf."

-Kyle Lickenbrock
SIUE senior golfer

SIUE was able to get through three and a half holes Sunday before the inclement conditions forced the teams back into the clubhouse.

"I was a little disappointed in the fact that we didn't get to play (Sunday)," Lickenbrock said. "I definitely think a two-day win is better than a one-day win."

"I absolutely love the competition," he added. "I love when we're going out and

Cosmic bowling night unviels at Cougar Lanes bowling alley

by Marty Jenkins
Alestle Sports Reporter

Get ready to lace up the bowling shoes and have loads of fun as cosmic bowling sets to hit SIUE on Wednesday.

The reconstruction and renovation recently completed at Cougar Lanes helped launch the cosmic bowling event.

High-tech adjustments made to the bowling alley include a new lighting system featuring numerous lighting effects, new speakers and a new satellite system that will play techno music. All of the changes are computer generated.

Cougar Lanes Manager Stephen Siegel believes the night will be a big hit with SIUE students.

"We have a show that is second to none," Siegel said. "We're pushing for students real hard right now and I hope they will come out and have a good time."

Senior criminal justice and political science major Christine Williams, who was one of the first people to sign up, said she is looking forward to the event very much.

"Cosmic bowling will give me the opportunity to have a great time with my friends ..." Williams said. "I used to do cosmic bowling at Scott Air Force Base and it was lots of fun."

Senior Joe Rujawitz is also looking forward to the event.

"I really think cosmic bowl is a great idea because it gives people a break on Wednesday nights from studying and it is a good opportunity to hang out with friends and meet new friends," he said.

Cosmic bowl will be held every Wednesday night from 8 to 10 p.m. Students can rent a lane for $15 and there can be from four to six people for each lane.

Included in the $15 is two hours of bowling, one medium pizza, a 20-ounce soda and rental shoes for each bowler.

Students must present their student ID upon arrival to participate in the event. Registration is from 7:30 to 7:55 p.m.

It is recommended that students make reservations in a timely fashion, because spaces may fill up by Wednesday. Reservations will be taken until noon Wednesday and there is a $5 deposit required.

Students can also play billiards or arcade games on Wednesday night if they choose not to bowl.

over it."

Kicking up the intensity in the second period, SIUE tried its luck, attacking the Flyers with 14 shots, five on goal, to no avail.

"Our combination play from the middle-third to the attacking-third (of the field) was much improved this weekend," Huneke said. "I was pleased with how we played in most aspects of the game."

Senior midfielder Mike Banner led the SIUE offense with five shots, followed by Matthews with four.

The Flyers scored their winning shot 33 minutes, 18 seconds into the game off the foot of Craig McIntosh.

Lewis had 15 shots and trailed behind the Cougars in the Great Lakes Region standings.

Currently, SIUE holds strong at No. 2, while Lewis trails at No. 5. The win lifted Lewis to 7-1 overall and 5-1 in the GLVC. The Cougars are now 3-2-3 and 3-1-1 in the conference.

The Cougars kicked the weekend off on a good note as they squeaked past Parkside on the Rangers' home field.

SIUE put the first blemish of the season on the Rangers' record as Parkside fell to 6-1 on the season.

"We were ready to play," Huneke said. "I felt that our ability to pressure their backs and our ability to penetrate made the difference."

SIUE freshman Dustin Attarian helped boost his team's momentum when he scored just eight minutes into the game off of an assist by senior teammate Kevin Thibodeau. Parkside's Greg Walasek evened the score 11 minutes later, courtesy of an assist by Bojan Jovicic, who is currently the leading scorer in the nation.

Attarian, not to be out-done, answered back with the deciding goal at 47:25.

"He showed well this weekend," Huneke said. "I do think he is making the adjustment to college quite well and I hope it continues."

Before butting heads with SIUE, only two goals had been scored on the Rangers all season.

SIUE outshot the Parkside by one. Five of the Cougar's 10 shots were attributed to Attarian. Banner had two others.

SIUE goalkeeper Greg Crook held his own in the net, notching five saves on the day.

SIUE has a chance to reboot this week. The Cougars retake the field when they take on Rockhurst University in GLVC action at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Korte Stadium.

The Cougars play in their biggest event of the year Sunday and Monday when they head to the NCAA Division II Great Lakes Regional Tournament at Hawk's Head Golf Club in South Haven, Mich.

Viehl said the Cougars would look to finish in the top six of a field that included all 23 teams from the Great Lakes Region.

Lickenbrock said it would take the entire team to perform well for the Cougars to be successful.

"It's going to take grinding out a round every single hole both days," Lickenbrock said. "It's just going to be whoever is the most mentally tough up there is going to win because it's in Michigan. We got really lucky last year. We had fairly good weather. But, I mean, it's in Michigan and it's the end of September. So who knows what the weather could be. That's the whole thing with fall golf."
